WORKSHOP

CULTURAL AWARENESS

Attention government and non government agencies, this Workshop is an interactive day of table and group discussions standing alongside each other as we participate and impart knowledge. Therefore it is not about me, you, I or them. This workshop represents all of us engaging in a conversation promoting global diversity, unconscious bias, how our listening impacts our listening, learning about our own bias & being reflective. How else can we engage in formidable conversations and looking at what blocks compassion (intentional or non intentional) in the context of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander policy and service delivery?

Written with YOU IN MIND, this workshop is for any non or Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander field operatives, policy makers and service delivery teams. It is structured against the backdrop of a fast moving society where anything goes, and we have to manage, cope, change and adapt in not only our workplaces, but our families and communities.

There are so many reasons to attend this workshop.

You will benefit from being able to engage and interact directly with a highly experienced and qualified Aboriginal facilitator and work through a program woven from material related to the adaptive workplace, adult learning and development, employee engagement, and workplace inclusion and diversity.
